Lincoln's Message.

We expected a nullification of Hunter's reported proclamation by the President, and it has come. It is as explicit as could be desired upon Hunter; but then the President does not commit himself on the principle. He does not say that the military power cannot abolish slavery in some contingencies; but he reserves to himself the right to decide if such a contingency happens; and declines to allow a subordinate to exercise such a power. He does not claim such a power, nor repudiate it. Then comes an exhortation to the States to accept aid to pay for slaves and adopt emancipation.

The President has a partiality for the two sides of eight questions. He first dissolves and nullifies the act of Hunter—that will satisfy the border States, but it will shock the simon-pure Abolitionists; so he lets them know that he has not decided that slavery can't be thus disposed of; and that in some emergency he may be emancipate slaves. He goes further, and intimates that the signs of the times are mal-omenous for slavery, and that slaveholders had better make a good bargain now whilst the chance is.

This message is not likely to be very satisfactory to any party. Hunter's proclamation is a nullity. He declared all the slaves free in three States. If he had declared all marriage void, and all minors free, boys at fourteen and girls at twelve, it could not have been more ridiculous. The country naturally looked to the Commander-in-Chief of six hundred thousand men to disavow such an act, not for its effect, but as an indication of what we are to expect from the military as well as the chief chief.

Well, he disapproves Hunter's proclamation, but leaves the future in the dark; still, however, urging emancipation by other means.

The President had the occasion to have done a great deal; but it is past. The whole matter is as uncertain as ever; except that Hunter's proclamation is disapproved as a present policy, and not upon principle.

We confess we don't care ourselves a great deal for these proclamations, even if issued by the President. They are not only legally, but naturally and physically void. The status of the black race in the South can't be changed materially by proclamations; but an infinite amount of trouble and suffering may be produced by the folly of those in high places. We may sit it down as fixed that this rebellion can never be put down by emancipating slaves.

The President and his advisers are laboring under a great misapprehension as to that point of inducing States to liberate their slaves upon receiving payment for them.

The suggestion is wild and visionary. We don't believe that there is a slave State that has the slightest disposition to make a trade of this sort; and we know very well that the North will not stick to such a bargain. One part of the North would like the emancipation very well, but they would not agree to pay the money; the rest would think the emancipation itself ill-advised, and, of course, would object to pay for it. It will be a long time before the white man in this country will agree, by his labor and toil, to pay thousands of millions to emancipate and colonize negroes. Common sense will condemn the wild experiment.

In short, it is a task difficult enough to put down this rebellion by itself, and the men who do it must let the negro alone. All men will find this out before they get through.

The Mobile Evening News says fools have often pulled down empires that Balaams and Caesars have reared. Yes, and the fools are making the experiment now. They want to pull down the Government that Washington & Co. built up. Our fools were common ones, they might succeed; but they are an uncommon sort of fools. They will fail, because their folly is too deep to be comprehensible by that large class of dunces whose help they need.

The act of conscription is a terrible comment on the professions and declarations of the rebel leaders. Think of it; men refuse to enlist to defend their homes and firesides; rather be slaves; buy an exemption at great cost; desert and leave the cause to take care of itself. These facts give the lie to the oft-repeated declarations of unanimity and zeal in the South.

Davis will protract the war twenty years before he will surrender one inch of Virginia soil. Whilst he will surrender an inch, he will abandon Virginia altogether. It is not the fashion of the rebels to wait long enough to surrender any place.

There is a one-horse Secession sheet published at Uniontown, Ky., called the News, that caters to the disloyal sentiment of that section as far as its feeble capacity will permit. It needs drying out.

Danville, the new rebel seat of government, is in Pittsylvania county, and on the river Dan. As there will be much intrigue on the banks of the Dan, while the Jeff Davis Cabinet tarries there, we are ready with the prophecy of the patriarch: "Dan shall be a serpent by the way; an adder in the path, that biteth the horses' heels so that his rider shall fall backwards."

A young man named N. B. Tilden, supposed to be one of Morgan's spies, was arrested at Bardstown, by Capt. Green, last Tuesday. Tilden says he is an Englishman, and that he has never been naturalized. He is confined in the Bardstown jail.

of a nation, than can be readily accounted for by mere philosophical speculators. The currency, acting reciprocally, is dependent upon the merchant.

We believe that this is only to be accounted for by the fact that a nation's vitality and self-sustaining power is shown by its resistance to assaults. It is this which has shown the Anglo-Saxon race, while beyond question the most progressive, and yet not the most warlike, the ablest to assume and maintain war with an ease that is probably incomprehensible to other nations. There is always an innate confidence in the people that it will be carried out and sustained and the nation preserved which has not and perhaps never will be found in the merciful Gaul or the haughty Spaniard. Their nationality is to the people a fact, and while other nations succumb, this one rises and prospers, in consciousness of its strength.

These facts are pressing upon us as facts by the unprecedented rise of United States stocks in the midst of the war. One year ago United States six per cents were quoted at 90 $\frac{1}{2}$. With a debt since of a little less than four hundred millions, and not one dollar yet taxed even to pay the interest, the coupon sixes of 1881 were sold at 1 02 $\frac{1}{2}$, and the fives at 93 $\frac{1}{2}$.

The 7-30 "war notes," against which no much was said, have risen to 105, and are now at a premium on gold.

These prices are higher premiums than they were in peace—far higher than when Fort Sumter was fired on. It is an additional fact that there has not been one dollar borrowed in European cities. The United States has not been compelled, or thought it necessary, to bring foreigners into competition. The money is loaned entirely by the people of this country.

These facts carry with them the force of conviction. It is not theoretic speculation, but the calm opinion of the citizens of the increased value of United States stocks, which will inevitably rise so soon as the tax bill is passed. That is all that is wanted to carry it up to the highest premium that can be paid upon the precious metals.

Its basis is the firm confidence of the people in the maintenance of law and order, the Union, the Constitution and the enforcement of the laws; the belief that every man will have the fruits of his labor paid for, and that he can be secure and perfect in the protection of his property. This, certainly, worth all theories of Government, sustains him in all his labors, and gives him breathing time in the midst of war. No doubt enters or must enter into his calculation.

The government must be strong enough to act, and act thoroughly, for that protection, in spite of all assaults; and it is this which the citizen demands as his rights. It is unspoken confidence in this which secures him and makes him safe in his home, and clothes him with that perfect confidence that only can come from a strong government; one which suppresses, not only rebellions, but raids, with a resolute and unflinching hand. It is this peace and security which makes the suppression of outlawry a religious duty. It is this day which will be carried out with firm and resolute determination throughout the land. The merchant and mechanic, the farmer and the laborer, must feel safe in his home and by his fireside. It is what will be done with terrible and avenging force if necessary.

The following promotions have been made in the Twenty-sixth Kentucky since the battle at Shiloh, Tenn., April 7, 1862:

CAPTAIN. First Lieutenant Hackett to be Captain. Second Lieutenant W. W. Ramsey to be First Lieutenant. Orderly Sergeant Stephen Woodward to be Second Lieutenant.

CAPTAIN. Second Lieutenant A. J. Wells, to be Captain. Third Sergeant Frederick Guy to be First Lieutenant. Sergeant Major Joseph R. Harris to be Second Lieutenant.

CAPTAIN. Second Lieutenant R. H. Earhart to be First Lieutenant. Orderly Sergeant J. M. Hollard to be Second Lieutenant.

CAPTAIN. Captain Thomas B. Fairtright, of this company, to be First Lieutenant. First Lieutenant James H. Ashurst to be Captain. Second Lieutenant Samuel D. Brown to be First Lieutenant. Orderly Sergeant George F. Elder to be Second Lieutenant. Assistant Surgeon J. M. Batley to be Surgeon. Dr. Bennett, of Logan County, to be Assistant Surgeon. Walter Linton, private Company D, to be Sergeant Major.

The Twenty-sixth Kentucky went into the fight on the 7th, at Shiloh, with only 260 men, out of which number 78 were killed and wounded.

The Mobile Evening News says fools have often pulled down empires that Balaams and Caesars have reared. Yes, and the fools are making the experiment now. REBELLION. It is asserted that four of the rebel Generals were born in Massachusetts, one in New York, one in Pennsylvania, one in New Jersey, and one Ohio. It is admitted on all hands that they are the meanest of all the officers in the rebel army, just as the most rabid Scotch editors—like some of New Orleans, Memphis, and Charleston—are renegade Northerners.

Hospital No. 4, corner of Fifteenth and Main streets. Hospital No. 5, corner of Seventh and Main streets. Hospital No. 6, corner of Court and Green streets. Hospital No. 7, in the hospital-pox, on Bardstown road, near Cave Hill Cemetery.

For SALE.—Several fonts of wooden type and a variety of cuts necessary in a well-appointed job office. Also, a No. 1 Ruggles card cutter, nearly new and in good order. Apply at this office.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.—Will the members of the Chamber of Commerce please read this morning, in our "river masters" column, a few lines in reference to the Portland bar? This obstruction to the river trade has been increasing every year, and now threatens utterly to destroy all communication, when the time of very low water comes, between this city and the river below, as well as between Portland and New Albany, unless the ferries ply between Portland and the island, and a road be built from the island to the Indians shore. To prevent the evil threatened, we see only two methods. One is to build a new landing, with a long road, at West Louisville, or Dunkirk, so as to get beyond the reach of the bar; the other to open a new channel from the foot of the falls, on the north side of Sand Island, and, closing up the old channel, reclaim so much land to the use of the business of the city. As we look at it, this is a matter of the greatest importance to our business men, which they should at once take up, and they cannot do so better than through the Board of Trade. Will the Board act?

THEATER.—Miss Daly appeared again last night before an audience which was very large, when the state of the weather is taken into consideration. We do not, never did, admire the caricatures known as "stage Yankees." They are frequently broadly drawn by the author, and so elaborated by the actor, as to become painfully disagreeable. We should be better pleased to see Miss Daly drop such character plays as "Our Gal," but are bound to state that she plays it well. To-night we are to have a repetition of Our Female American Cousin, and the farce, Loss of a Lover, in both of which Miss Daly will appear, and in both of which she will sing. It is worth the price of admission to hear her in a pretty Tyrolean air, which she knows so well how to carol, and we advise lovers of good acting and good singing to be on hand.

PROF. HOLYKE.—We are called upon this morning to chronicle a painful event—the death of Prof. E. A. Holyoke, Principal of the Female High School of this city. He died last evening of consumption. His funeral will take place to-morrow evening.

Prof. Holyoke has been in charge of the Female High School, from its organization till his final sickness, and this fact of itself tells the estimate placed upon his abilities by the Board of Trustees. In his death the cause of education in this city has met with a serious loss. His residence of several years among us had endeared him to many who will with full hearts mourn their loss, while the school which has been his care and pride will lament a loss which to them will seem irreparable.

THE SANITARY COMMISSION received a despatch Wednesday morning from Dr. McLoog, at Pittsburg Landing, advising them not to send the steamer Telegraph until further orders. The inference from this that there is no present necessity to make further provisions for our sick Kentucky soldiers in General Halleck's army is extremely gratifying. Should it become necessary, our citizens will have timely advice, so that our floating palatial hospital can be ready for the reception of the brave sons of our State who may be prostrated by sickness or disabled by wounds.

ANSWER.—A file of soldiers belonging to Colonel Warner's Regiment, arrested Richard Stowers at Palmetto, Ky., on Monday, whence he will be conveyed to the Newport barracks or Lexington, probably the former place. The Cincinnati Commercial says Stowers is a prominent man, having been a director of the Kentucky Central Railroad, and has been a most active sympathizer with rebels and traitors since the commencement of the rebellion.

POLICE PROCEEDINGS.—Tuesday, May 20. Com'th vs John Sneefer vs John Shumer, peace warrant; own bond of each in $100 for one year.

James Buckley, drunkenness and disorderly conduct; discharged.

THIRD STREET.—The denizens of Third street, near the river, have requested us respectfully to petition the Street Inspector to come down that way at least once in a month. All the cross-streets near the river are in a terrible condition, and should be cleaned before the sickly season is on us.

NEW BOOK, BY Mrs. Wood.—T. B. Peter son & Brother inform us that next Saturday they will issue a new novel by Mrs. Wood, authoress of "Alice Lynne," and entitled "A Life's Secret; a Story of Woman's Revenge."

PHENIX.—Did you take lunch yesterday at the Phenix? If not you missed a treat, which we advise you not to miss again.

We are indebted to McCarrill, 210 Jefferson street, for a copy of Will Hays' new song, "I'm Looking for Him Home."

At a meeting of the stockholders of the Jeffersonville Railroad Company, in Jeffersonville, Ind., on the 19th instant, at which 8,405 shares of the capital stock was represented, the following gentlemen were unanimously elected directors of the Company for the ensuing year:
